DEAN'S MESSAGE

During the week of March 2nd, Touro College is being inspected by the Middle States Association of Colleges and Schools. A member of that Inspection Team probably will visit the Huntington campus. We are quite experienced at receiving inspectors, so look forward to the visit.

It is with deep sadness that I advise you that Associate Dean Michael Saewitz will be leaving Touro this July. Dean Saewitz will be moving to Philadelphia where he and his wife have already taken up residence.

When Dean Saewitz leaves us in July, he will have completed nearly five years of service at the Law School. He reported to work on the day our Law School moved to Huntington. I do not think it is an exaggeration to say that no one has made a greater contribution to the development of Touro Law School than Michael Saewitz. He has been involved in every aspect of the life of the Law School for the last five years, and on a number of occasions the full responsibility for the administration of the Law School has rested on his shoulders. I have worked closely with many administrators in the course of my career and have met few administrators of Michael Saewitz's level of competence.

The job of an associate dean is not an easy one. It is not a position where one is likely to win friends. The associate dean must make difficult decisions that have an adverse effect on some individuals. Many times he merely is carrying out policy laid down by the faculty or the Dean. Yet, as the messenger, he is blamed for the message. It is impossible to be an effective administrator without making some difficult decisions and without ruffling some feathers. Tranquility is found only in the grave - not in the development of a dynamic law school. Michael Saewitz has carried out his responsibilities with distinction and has had a profound impact on the progress we are making at Touro Law School.

I feel confident that I speak for the Touro Community when I thank Michael for his devotion and for his excellent performance during the last five years. We wish him success in his career and hope that Dana and he have a happy and fulfilling life in Philadelphia.
